(8) When assembly is complete, the figure is ready to be primed and painted. Priming the metal prevents oxidation and peeling of the paints. We recommend Floquil spray primer (it's grey in color and should be available at your local hobby shop).

(9) Now the figure is ready to be painted. We recommend Floquil and Humbrol paints be used to obtain best results. There are many painting techniques that can be used. They are described in various hobby magazines and books available through your local hobby store. Techniques like dry brushing and washes and vibrant colors yield good results after a little practice.

(10) After the painted figure is dry, glue it to a small balsa wood base about 3/8" or 1/4" thick for each handling during a game. You can make the base look nice by terryaining it with model railroad materials such as "Kibri" grass and sand.

(11) Finally, if you buy a set that has a broken or missing or incorrect piece, do not return the set to us. Simply drop us a postcard with your name, address and the part you need. We will ship you a replacement part.

Many Dragontooth sets come as kits that require assembly. We recommend these techniques be used by the modeler to achieve the best results:

(1) Using an X-acto knife or rat's tail file to clean off any sprue leads or flash (thin metal feathering along the mold line.)

(2) Check the fit of each piece (sometimes the fit changes due to the nature of the manufacturing process) and adjust with knife, file or pliers.

(3) On our very large pieces we often use a lower tin content metal to keep prices down. This metal is not flexible when cool, like our smaller pieces. However, some degree of flexibility can be regained by holding the piece with pliers in hot (not boiling) water for a while, and bending carefully into shape with the pliers after it has heated up.

(4) Many of our parts (even heads) are interchangeable between sets. This allows a great deal of variety for the modeler. Decide what piece goes where before gluing.

(5) We recommend Elmer's 5 Minute Epoxy (available through hardware stores) or a similar glue. Before mixing and applying the glue with a toothpick, as per instructions, set the pieces you will be gluing in a bed of non-hardening plasticene modeling clay. This clay will hold the pieces until the glue sets. Epoxy makes a better bond and fills small gaps better than superglue.

(6) On larger pieces, rubber bands can be used and then cut off once the glue has set.

(7) Further conversion and filler work on the unpainted figure can be done by using plumbers' or ribbon E-Pox-E (green & yellow). With patience, almost anything can be made from this stuff (Keep your fingers and tools wet with water).

The City of Magic

Your CITY OF MAGIC building is made of Vacuum-formed Styrene plastic. To assemble it: cut each piece out of the sheet with a sharp hobby knife or a good pair of small scissors, follow the edge of the building section or the edge of the tab of a building section where it meets the flat sheet. When all the pieces have been cut out check the fit by temporarily gluing the pieces together with Rubber Cement. First let the Rubber Cement become tacky and then put the pieces together. To assemble permanently use Super or Crazy Glues

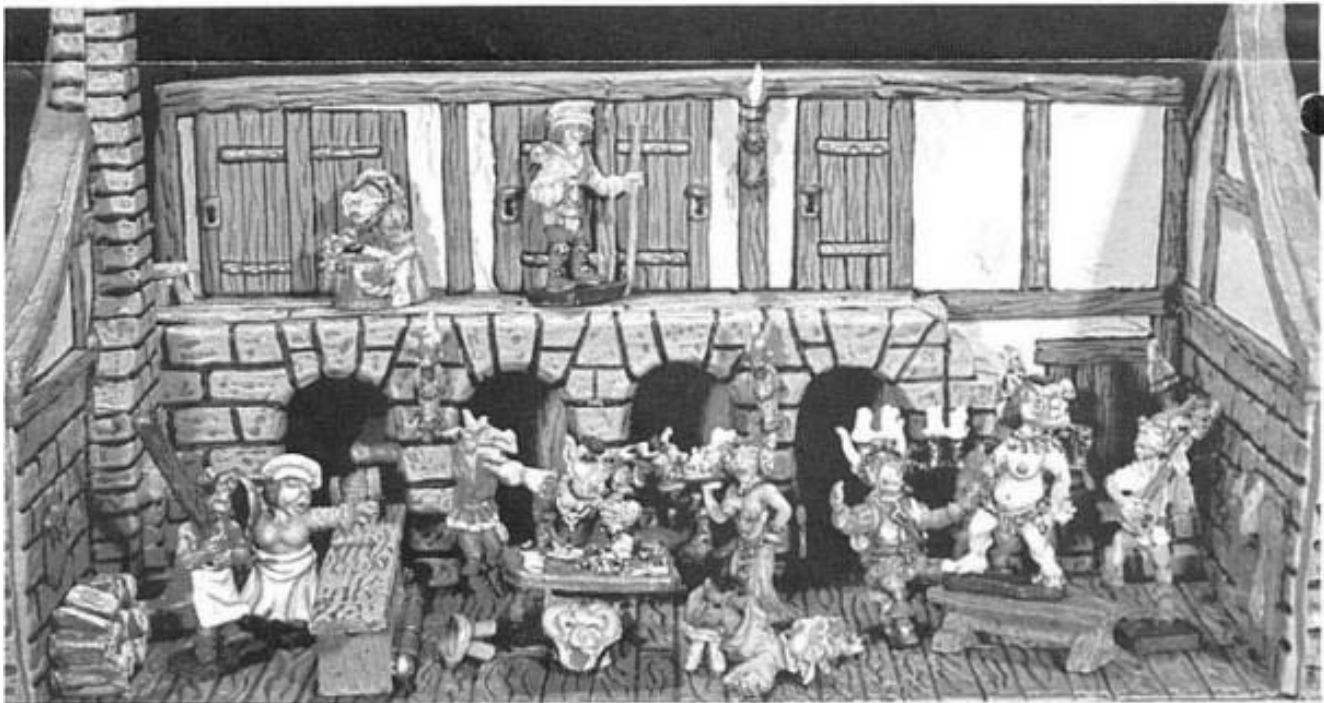

In order to paint the building you must first coat it with primer because most paints will not adhere to this plastic and some may even dissolve it. The best primer we recommend using is Gesso which is water soluble, also usable but with extreme care is Floquil's RA9 Primer as it has a powerful solvent in it that can dissolve the plastic. As used as instructed in the spray form it provides an excellent base for paint as does the Gesso which may be applied with a brush. Once primed, any hobby paints can be used to paint it although water soluble brands like Armory Paints will not harm the plastic under any circumstance.

To assemble the metal pieces in the set we recommend Elmer's 5 minute Epoxy or a similar glue. Super or Crazy glue may also be used. Set the pieces in a bed of non hardening Plastilene Clay until the glue sets to help you hold them together. Clean the excess flash or sprue leads metal from the figure using a good hobby knife like Xacto or Teka brand or a rat's tail hobby file is most useful. To paint the figures use the primers mentioned above and paint with your favorite brand of hobby or figure paints.

When gluing the metal pieces to the plastic pieces we recommend Super or Crazy glue.

Ye Blind Cyclops Inn

This kit is intended to be the spectacular flagship of the City of Magic line for a number of reasons. It is the first kit to include both the interior and exterior of the building. It showcases our ability to achieve fine detail in this plastic, from the pots and pans and spoons on the kitchen wall to locks and keyholes. It has the parts to make a complete two story Inn with numerous guest rooms, storerooms and booths. The building itself captures the mystique of a hard luck, anything goes joint in the Thieves Quarter of the City of Magic. The Inn is run and occupied by 13 characters cast in metal.

DRAGONTOTH is proud to announce the release of KING NIFLUNG'S THRONE HALL. This is Kit #005 of our CITY OF MAGIC line. KING NIFLUNG'S THRONE HALL comes, as shown in the photo, with over 40 finely sculpted white metal castings that make up a banquet scene in the throne hall of the dwarf king. The throne hall itself is made up of 9 highly detailed and easy to assemble plastic parts. The plastic parts enable you to make a massive stone-columned hall fit for any king. The metal pieces, including the dwarf king Niflung, various courtiers and servants allow you to throw a banquet that would do any FANTASY ROLE PLAYING GAME or DIORAMA COLLECTION proud.

The COLLECTOR'S EDITION of this kit will be limited to the first 1000 kits sold and will include a certificate signed and numbered by the artists, Tom Loback and Steve Tofano validating it. Those of you who have collected our other CITY OF MAGIC kits know of the uniquely enjoyable and satisfying experience that results. Those of you purchasing one for the first time will be pleasantly surprised by this, our finest effort. DRAGONTOTH FANTASY FIGURES stand for quality, value and above all, imagination.

Don't miss this opportunity to become a citizen in DRAGONTOTH'S CITY OF MAGIC.
